ABSTRACT

A method for designing a system includes generating minimum and maximum delay budgets for connections from long-path and short-path timing constraints. The system is designed in response to the minimum and maximum delay budgets.